REVISION EYEWEAR HOSTS OPEN HOUSE FOR THEIR NEW STATE-OF-THE-ART FACILITY IN ESSEX JUNCTION, VERMONT

Essex Junction, VT (September 20, 2007) – Revision Eyewear, developers of purpose-built military eyewear, have moved their Williston, Vermont operations to a new state-of-the-art facility in Essex Junction, Vermont. The move was necessitated by Revision's dynamic growth in the marketplace for superior ballistic eyewear protection for the military and law enforcement agencies. The move to larger facilities allows Revision to continue on its growth trajectory. As part of the move, Revision also went live with a new ERP system that will provide Revision with increased scalability as the company moves ahead.

August 29th, marked the official opening of the new office with a ribbon cutting ceremony performed by Vermont's Senator Leahy and Revision's CEO, Jonathan Blanshay, followed by a facility tour.

The following day, the festivities continued as Revision hosted Vermont Governor Jim Douglas in a ceremony announcing Revision's support of the Vermont National Guard Fallen Heroes Memorial with a ceremonial check of $50,000 presented by Jonathan Blanshay to General Tom Drew of the Vermont National Guard Charitable Foundation. Tours of the facility followed for customers, suppliers, local politicians, media, employees and their families.
